Course Description: The issue of boys and literacy has finally been recognized around the world. Research has shown that boys do not achieve at the same level as girls in this area. This course looks into how boys are currently achieving in the areas of reading and writing on the national level. Participants will spend three days looking at literature that appeals to boys and the types of writing that will engage them as writers. After this course, participants will have a better understanding of how to hook boys into reading and writing, resulting in more success for male students.

About the Instructor: Rachel McGregor has been a literacy specialist for 14 years. She worked in the Framingham Public Schools and currently works in the Wellesley Public Schools. She has taught professional development courses for both school systems and enjoys working with teachers in and out of the classroom.
