Course Description: This course is designed to help participants create standards-based curriculum, instruction and assessment. Focused on moving beyond the educational buzzwords, the instructors model a standards-based approach, complete with course learning goals and associated rubrics. While grounded in readings on standards-based philosophy, this course is primarily practical in nature, including a number of hands-on, interactive activities to help connect the approach to classroom practice. By the end of the course, participants will have developed the instruments they need to implement standards-based education.

About the Instructors: Ken Brooke has been a Social Studies teacher since 1992 and has been teaching at Needham High School since 2002. He received his BA at Bristol University, UK and his MA at UMASS Boston. Dan Hudder has taught English at Needham High School since 2001. He has his BS from New York University and his MA from UMASS Boston. Ken and Dan have been using standards-based education practices in their classrooms for many years. They developed and have taught a graduate-level course on standards-based education for Needham teachers, and they are excited to bring their knowledge and experience to TEC.
