Course Description: This online course offers a practical look at the process approach to teaching writing, an approach that applies to all subjects and disciplines. Participants will study and engage in online discussions about the nature of the process approach for the teaching of composition as they explore the five fundamental phases of the writing process: prewriting, drafting, revising, editing, and publishing. The course will introduce participants to Moodle, a powerful, free, open-source software tool. Using Moodle, participants will create activities to help the students understand and use the writing process. These activities will include private online journals that are shared primarily with the teacher, assignments for creating rough drafts, workshops for revising, lessons for editing, and forums for publishing.

All participants will develop a useful writing task for their students, incorporating the Moodle tools they have learned during the course.

About the Instructor: Brendan Desilets is a former middle school English teacher for Bedford Public Schools. He has extensive experience as a classroom teacher and as a "Moodler."
