Course Description: This course will offer an overview of the many ways early childhood classrooms (PreK – Grade 2) can be “Ready Classrooms” where all children can meet with success. The classroom environment will be studied in detail as a place where learning must be accessible and differentiated for a wide range of learners. The classroom as an important teaching tool requires careful attention to detail. The transitions, schedule of the day, working with a multidisciplinary team, assessment and parent partnerships are all important components in an effective inclusive environment and will be studied in detail as teachers deepen their understanding.

About the Instructors: Vicki Milstein is currently the Early Education principal in Brookline, where she provides supervision and professional development for preschool and kindergarten teachers and support staff. She manages various grants for the early childhood program as well. She has been an instructor at Wheelock College and MassBay Community College, specializing in early childhood education. Min-Jen Taylor is a Pre-Kindergarten teacher in Brookline, where she implements curriculum in an inclusive classroom. She also works as an onsite supervisor with the Launch Summer Program. In her work with the summer program, she coordinates their organizational, staffing and operational activities.
