Course Description: What Web 2.0 tools are available to incorporate into my classroom literature studies? Which ones are schoolworthy? How can I go about working a literature-based tech project into my already busy school day? In this course, teachers will become familiar with a variety of web-based tools that are elementary grade level appropriate (such as Voice Thread and Animoto), develop literature based activities, discuss strategies for tech integration, and build classroom connections to quality, current children's literature.

About the Instructor: Ann Ritchie is a former classroom, library, and technology teacher at the elementary level with experience in urban, suburban, and rural schools. Passionate about books and reading, she is an avid children's book advocate and a reviewer for AudioFile magazine. She is a certified L.O.T.I. mentor trained in technology integration into curriculum.
