Course Description: On January 26, 2016 the Massachusetts Board of Elementary and Secondary Education implemented the newest version of the Massachusetts Science and Technology/Engineering Standards. The national Next Generation Science Standards have been modified and integrated with parts of the previous state Science Standards (2006) to produce these hybrid standards.

In this course, participants will explore all aspects of these new Science Standards, along with examples of hands-on applications in Earth & Space, Life, Physical Sciences and Technology/Engineering. Best practices will be addressed as well as the defined expectations regarding student practices and skills. To highlight the new standards' emphasis on using community resources in your science program, at least one field trip is planned.

Come find out about the new standards and get ideas for implementing them before the next school year!

About the Instructor: This is the third version of the Massachusetts Science Standards that instructor, Charlie Haffey, has seen since joining the Norwood Public Schools in 1989 as an elementary science teacher. He has developed, and continually modifies, a spiraled scope and sequence with hundreds of lesson plans and dozens of support videos. He has provided professional development in both curriculum and technology subjects since 1986.
